Do you ev-er sit and stu-dy of the dear old days gone by, When How often she has kissed me when she thought I was a-sleep, And as a child you've play'd at mother's knee, And knelt be-side my bed at night to pray, As looked in-to her dear old face that always had a smile. Who from her trembling lips came forth these words so soft and sweet May the

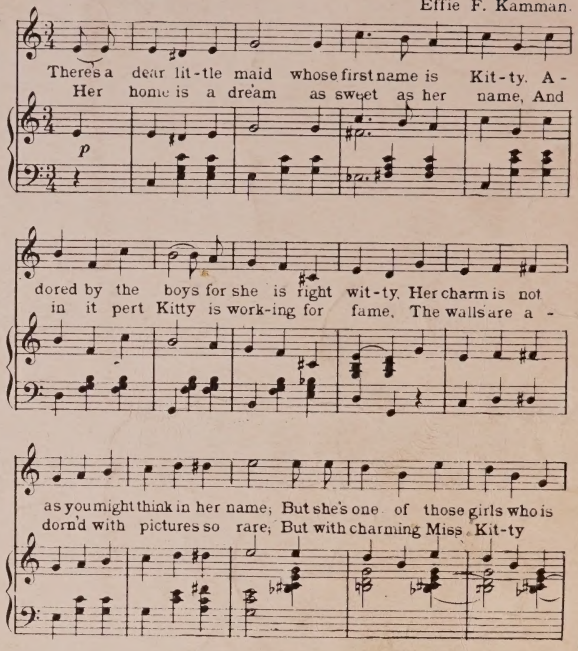
KITTY CLOVER.

Effie F. Kamman.



There's a dear lit-tle maid whose first name is Kit-ty. A-Her home is a dream as sweet as her name, And dored by the boys for she is right wit-ty. Her charm is not in it pert Kitty is work-ing for fame. The walls are aas you might think in her name; But she's one of those girls who is dorn'd with pictures so rare; But with charming Miss Kit-ty
